Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 12 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Windy and feeling cold, but turning milder next week.

This Evening and Tonight:
Further snow showers across northern and eastern Scotland and parts of northeast England. Otherwise, a dry night with clear spells. Windy with coastal gales in the west and feeling bitterly cold.

Saturday:
Dry for many but outbreaks of snow will develop over Northern Ireland during the morning and then spread into southwest England, Wales and western Scotland later.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Band of rain, sleet, and for some, snow/ice, moving east on Sunday, clearing to milder weather with a mix of cloud, rain, showers and sunny spells. Windy, especially in northwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.